Forecast For East Midlands
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Thursday 24 Jun 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Some rain at first. Brighter spells later, but also showers.

Today:
Any early brighter spells will be brief, with cloud soon thickening from the north ahead of a band of mostly light rain spreading south. Cloud possibly breaking up to brighter spells through the afternoon, but with occasional showers then likely. Maximum temperature 22 deg C (72 deg F).

Tonight:
Any daytime showers easing at first, before cloud then thickens again from the north. A further area of rain then spreads southeast after midnight. Minimum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Friday:
Rather cloudy and damp start with outbreaks of rain and drizzle clearing east through the morning. Brighter, perhaps sunny spells developing by the afternoon, but also the odd shower possible. Maximum temperature 19 deg C (66 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Dull for much of Saturday, with cloudy skies and outbreaks of rain, and only limited brighter spells. Turning drier through Sunday with showers clearing south. Fine with warm sunshine Monday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.